

LIVING COST PAID TO BAD TRANSPORTATION

Mrs. McCan, Suffragist, Comes
From California to Undo
Bibb's Work.

We are making desperate efforts to extend credit to the farmer; now we have reached the point where we must give him Government aid in distributing the products we help him to raise. This, in a nut shell, is the purpose of our visit to Washington, as defined by Mrs. David Chambers McCan, suffragist, president of the Los Angeles Civil Service Commission, and advocate of a national marketing commission.

Even that list does not exhaust the range of Mrs. McCan's activities, for she also is deeply interested in music and art. Her traveling companion is Miss Maud Allan, classic dancer, who became converted to the woman suffrage cause while in California.

Mrs. McCan held a conference today with Senator Duncanson. Fletcher regarding the national campaign she plans for the national marketing commission, or the introduction of a bill looking to the end in the next Congress. Such a bill was introduced last session, but was sidetracked by the filibuster.

Lack of Intelligent Study.
"Not over production, but poor methods of transportation," she said, "has been the cause of the glutted markets in the summer, and soaring prices in the winter. Take the case of the citrus fruits. There would be tales of heavy shipments, then the fruit growers would stop sending oranges. The word would go forth that there was a dearth of oranges in Chicago, for example, and the shippers would dump more oranges on the market. The result would be that the oranges would be used in weeks. Perhaps the word would be shipped on to New York, and by the time it got there, higher prices were being paid in Chicago."

"All that is to be done is to have a study of the problems of distribution. Every one realizes that a principal factor in the high cost of living has been the congestion of population in the cities, away from the farms, and the lack of intelligent study of the channels of supply."

The plan urged by Mrs. McCan, which will be presented to Congress, is that of a national marketing commission, in close touch with the state commissions, in turn, to be centers of information for country commissions in every State.

Helped Get Women Votes.
Mrs. McCan brings to bear on her work as campaign chairman of this movement a personality that has served her well in many previous crusades. Her appointment to the Civil Service Commission grew out of her work on an efficiency commission in Los Angeles. She was chairman of the California committee of the National Woman's Party when suffrage was in California. She then became president of the Friday Morning Club, a civic organization of Los Angeles which "does things," and she was president of the South California Woman's Press Club.

"The thing that hurls a suffragist in the East," she continued, "is to see the unjust and futile cartoons, without point and reason. One was posted in New York window, showing a mother with her child, and opposite her an alleged 'suffragette' smoking a cigarette. Could anything be more ridiculous."

"Another criticism that has been exploded by experience in California is that, when women get the vote, they will usurp all offices. We have had the vote some years now, and there are only two women office holders who draw pay, but there are nineteen women on boards and commissions who serve for the love of it."

Mrs. McCan herself serves without pay on the Civil Service Commission, which already has accomplished much of the work in standardizing positions just undertaken by New York city.

WAR HELPING CAUSE OF THE SUFFRAGISTS

Congressional Union Encouraged By Recent Announcement By Queen Wilhelmina of Holland

Evidence that the European war is doing much to raise the status of women throughout the world is seen by leaders of the Congressional Union for Woman Suffrage in the recent announcement by Queen Wilhelmina of Holland that she favors the passage by the Dutch government of a bill enfranchising the women of the Netherlands.

"The war has shown with awful clearness the sufferings inflicted on women in belligerent countries, and the great value of their services at home when the men are called to the front," said Mrs. Nina E. Alexander, chairman of the District of Columbia branch of the Congressional Union. "At such a time men are willing to admit women's right to vote on questions which affect them so closely."

"There seems little reason to doubt that the women of Holland will be enfranchised this year," she continued. "The government is behind the suffrage bill and from the speech from the throne, it appears that Queen Wilhelmina personally favors it. At present the Queen has immense influence over her people. All her subjects feel the difficulty of her position in maintaining neutrality while war is raging on the Dutch border, and the country is lined up solidly behind her."

Following Other Countries.
"In proposing to extend suffrage to women, Holland is following the example of the other northern countries of Europe," said Miss Lucy Burns of the executive committee of the Congressional Union. "The women of Denmark were given the right to vote last summer. The new constitution which conferred suffrage on women and at the same time extended the franchise for men, was passed unanimously by the Danish parliament, and the King signed it the same afternoon."

noon. Undoubtedly the deep popular sentiment behind the bill was aroused by the war, which has shown the common interest of men and women in national affairs.

The women of Norway have had the right to vote since 1907. For some years, however, the franchise was limited by a tax-paying qualification not imposed upon the men; but in 1913 this qualification was removed and women now have the right to vote on the same terms that men do.

"Although Norwegian women gained their enfranchisement long before the present struggle in Europe, it is interesting to remember that their political freedom was granted them after a national crisis which led Norway and Sweden to the brink of war. Norway had just withdrawn from her federation with Sweden, and there was great danger that the separation could not be accomplished peacefully. Sweden, being the richer country, was far better equipped for war than Norway."

Limited Franchise in Norway.
"Under these circumstances a ballot was taken among the Norwegian men, asking whether they favored independence in spite of the risk of war; and the men voted heavily on the side of independence. At the same time an unofficial ballot was taken among the women; and the women voted for national independence as enthusiastically as the men did. So deeply were the men of Norway impressed by the patriotism of the women that they shortly afterward gave to them a limited franchise, which was extended within a few years to full suffrage."

"The women of Finland have had the right to vote since 1906, and have at large numbers in their national parliament. Again, it was due to the pressure of a foreign enemy that men were forced to recognize the need of women's services, and their right to a share in the government of their country. The national institutions of Finland were menaced by Russia. The women, as well as the men, resisted Russia's despotism, and the women were therefore granted the rights of full citizenship."

"We have a little country," said Mrs. Anna Malmer, a famous lecturer from Finland, on a recent tour in this country, "and we need the public services of all our people, women as well as men."

Oversea Wooer By Mail Accused

Maid of Athens Has Suitor Arrested as Jilted—He Wants American Wife.

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—A courtship by mail between New York and Athens led to the arrest of the wooer on a charge of breach of promise.

The defendant in the case is Anton Dimon, a native of Macedonia, who is a naturalized American. He has lived here nearly twenty years and is a member of Dimon Bros. & Co., fur manufacturers. He was sued for $5,000 damages by Miss Helen Connelley, who arrived here from Athens with her mother on May 11, expecting to become Dimon's bride. She asked for the arrest of Dimon on the ground that he had threatened to leave the State if she sued him. He was arrested by Deputy Sheriff McDonnell and Zettler on an order of Supreme Court Justice Finch and was released in $500 bail.

Miss Connelley is twenty-four years old and of statuesque appearance. Her family in Athens is wealthy and her father holds a high government position. She says that the refusal of Dimon to carry out an agreement to marry her made in July, 1914, caused her great mortification because it had become generally known to her friends that she was engaged to him. She had many valuable wedding presents when she learned that there would be no wedding.

Dimon denies that he promised or expected to marry Miss Connelley and said that while there might have been some negotiations, they were conducted by his brother, a wealthy furrier in Leipzig, and members of the young woman's family. "I knew nothing about any proposed marriage," said Dimon, "and the first I heard of it was when she was brought here to me like a cat in a bag, and I was told that I was expected to marry her. That is impossible, for I intend to marry an American girl to whom I have been engaged for three years."

tainly and women in a far different position than they occupied at the beginning of it. They will be stronger, economically and socially, than the neutral nations, looking on at the war, are deciding that the people, women as well as men, have a right to decide their own affairs. The belligerent countries at the close of the war will have to reorganize some of their political institutions, and give the people an opportunity to control their own 'war parties' and solve more publicly their foreign questions. This recognition will raise the question of woman suffrage, and very probably establish it in England and France, if not in Germany and Russia."

GERMAN DYNAMITE SHIP TO SELL CARGO

Skipper, After Waiting in Bay
for Nearly a Year, Will End Harbor Peril.

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—The German dynamite steamship Magdeburg, which was recently ordered by the Treasury Department to go out of Gravesend Bay, where she anchored, and put to sea, or dispose of her cargo, declared to be dangerous to shipping, probably will dispose of the dynamite in a few days. Capt. J. F. Wild of the Coast Guard, in charge of anchorage at this port, went to the Magdeburg at the request of her skipper, Capt. Heinrich Orgel, and took off 150 pounds of dynamite in three fifty-pound boxes. The skipper said he was going to see if he could sell the dynamite, having obtained permission from his owners in Hamburg. The Magdeburg is consigned to her skipper, who is valed with full authority to dispose of her cargo, consisting of 60,000 pounds.

After Captain Wild and his men had taken the dynamite from the hold and transferred it to the cutter Calumet, the hatches were sealed and the Calumet came back to the large office pier. It is said the dynamite has deteriorated somewhat and will not bring the price it might have brought when the Magdeburg dodged this port nearly a year ago to escape capture by British war craft. She was bound for Australia. There are lots of ammunition factories that may want to buy the Magdeburg's cargo.
